Shriver on McGovern's Ticket After Bid Is Refused by Muskie

By George Lardner Jr. WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (WP). -Sen. George McGovern picked Surgent Shriver as his new running mate on the Democratic ticket yesterday after Sen. Edmund 5. Muskie turned down the opportunity.

In announcing his selection on nationwide radio and television from the Capitol last night, Sen. McGovern said that Mr. Shriver's life "has been marked by a special dedication to the needs of the eager to get the campaign started, and wants to take his message to as-many Americans as Asked what his message is, he replied: "I want really to put America back on the pinnacle which it used to occupy in the minds and hearts of people all over the world. We've lost our sense of direction and purpose as a nation and that's visible everywhere you "The image of America has been blurred and darkened. "I'd like our country to be just as bright and glorious as it was when we started. That's wby I'm in the campaign. Sen. McGovern concluded his search for a second vice-presi-dential-candidate around noon with a phone call to Mr. Shriver near the Kennedy family com-

Sen. Eagleton followed up the announcement with a statement of his own, balling Mr. Shriver as "an excellent choice,"

"He'll be a hright, energetic. hard-working campaigner and an excellent vice-president," Sen. Eagleton said. He promised to "do everything I can to see the McGovern-Shriver ticket elected."

Sen. McGovern's press secretary, Richard Dougherty, confirmed the hubbub of rumors about the choice of Mr. Shriver in a midasternoon meeting with newsmen-on the understanding that Mr. Dougherly's words, along with an advance text of Sen. McGovern's speech, were to be emhargoed from the public until Sen. McGovern's appearance on television last night.

The South Dakota senator's campaign strategists and aides were plainly glad to be done with the painful and often embarrassing business of finding a new running mate. Mr. Shriver was the sixth or seventh man to whom Sen. McGovern had offered the job but only be and Sen. Eagleton

Speaking for the McGovern camp, Mr. Dougherty said that staff felt "enormous relief that we can get this thing over with and get on with the business of campaigning against Richard Nixon and his wretched record."

Sen. McGovern devoted most of his free TV time to doing just that, with a predominantly partisan text that prompted Sen. Robert J. Dole of Kansas, the Republican national chairman, to announce that the GOP would demand equal time on radio and television.

Sen. Dole charged in a statement last night that Sen, Mc-(Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

The department said that it had sought the dismissal of the indictment and obtained a U.S. District Court's permission to do so "because the decision was made not to answer defendant's mo-tions of disclosure of electronic surveillance" regarding the case. The department would not say what the nature of the surveillance was or what persons were involved. She was subsequently taken to Seattle, where she appeared before a U.S. grand jury that the Justice Department said was looking into that bombing and other matters "relating to national security."

The arrest was made by PBI agents during a raid on a youth lived with alleged members of the Mayday Tribe, a group that was organizing anti-war protests in Washington.

The Justice Department had conceded that it had picked up a conversation involving a defense lawyer or consultant on a foreign intelligence" wiretap that was being used in an unrelated investigation.

The government refused to disclose details of the wiretap incident to the defense, and the lower courts held that disclosure was not required.

Justice Douglas's stay froze the proceeding to let the defense petition the Supreme Court to review this ruling by the lower courts. KENNEBUNK BEACH, Maine, Aug. 6 (NYT).—Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, bowing to "family duties and the interests of my growing children," rejected yesterday Sen. George McGovern's offer to be the Democratic vice-presidential

The decision was made after long discussions with his wife, Jane, and four of his five chil-dren, Sen. Musicie said, adding:

"I telephoned Sen. McGovern this morning to tell him that, with considerable regret, it was not possible for me to accept his offer to run on his ticket with

On the front lawn of his summer home here, surrounded by his family, Sen. Muskic explained his decision by saying:

"It was a family decision and not a political decision. We have been involved almost four years in presidential politics. It had involved a neglect, to an extent no one finds satisfactory, of family duties and the interests of my growing children," Wife Especially Clied

Citing the "beavy emotional drain, especially for Mrs. Muskle as well as the children," the senator said that he felt regret about his decision because "the challenge of presidential politics is still very real."

Since the offer to Sen. Muskle hecame known in Washington Friday, there were persistent re-ports that Mrs. Muskle's reluctance to become involved in yet another campaign would he a major factor in the final decision. Although Mrs. Muskie was at her husband's side throughout a brief news conference, reporters had been asked to direct all questions to the scnator.

the campaign. He said he told Sen. McGovern at the beginning that be would have to return to Maine to discuss the matter with his family. He arrived here from Washington late Friday and soon began taking what he termed "the inevitable phone calls" from friends and advisers.

Hughes a Caller

Among those calling, according to sources clo.e to Mr. Muskie, were Sen. Herold Hughes of Iowa and Scn, Frank Church of Idaho. Opinion was reported divided among those calling, but it was generally believed that most of them had urged him to accept the numination:

"It was late in the evening before we finally got the privacy to discuss this as a family," Sen. Mu kle said. "And the discussion lasted until after midnight." He indicated that the deciding factor had been Mrs. Muskie's hesitancy, apparently stemming in part from her experiences in the primary campaign.

In the first primary, in New Hampshire, Mrs. Muskie was sharply criticized by an archconservative newspaper, the Manchester Union Leader. In response to that attack, Scn. Murkle made a highly emotional speech in Manchester that many political observers believe damag-

With Sen. Eagleton's withdrawal, however, Mr. Shriver's boosters began promoting him. He was also supported by Sen. McGovern's national political director, Frank Mankiewicz, and Sen McGovern's finance chairman, Henry Kimelman. Mr. Kimelman, it was learned, spoke highly of Mr. Shriver as the man for the job during a dinner shared by Mr. Kimelman and Sen. McGovern Wednesday night. ## Democratic Party's Regulars Pleased With New No. 2 Man

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (NYT). -The reaction of a cross-section of Senate Democrats last night was that the selection of Sargent Shriver as the Democratic vicepresidential candidate would add cnergy, strength and appeal to the party's presidential ticket.

Sen. George McGovern's selection of Mr. Shriver was generally acciaimed as a "good choice." hoth politically and in terms of campaigning abilities of Eugene L. Wyman, the Beverly Hills lawyer who raised the bulk of Sen. Eubert H. Humphrey's campaign funds this year, went so far as to proclaim the Shriver selection to be "McGovern's first good move

Sen. Humphrey, according to associates, "highly recommended" Mr. Shriver to Sen. McGovern isst week at a meeting at which the Minnesota Democrat declined the vice-presidential spot.

The Humphrey endorsement was an indication that Mr. Shriver could provide a bridge between the McGovern camp and the establishment Democrats who have felt themselves shorted aside by the McGovern candidacy.

In addition, Democratic politiciant pointed out privately, Mr. Shriver has appeal to labor and minority groups, whose votes Sen. McGovern will need in industriai states, as well as strong ties to the Jewish community. whose skepticism about the Mc-Govern candidacy has dried up some of the traditional Democratic sources of funds. On top of those assets, it was pointed out, Mr. Shriver will indirectly bring the political aura of the Kennedy name to the Democratic

Seo. Mike Mansfield of Montana, the Senate Democratio predicted, along with ieader. many of his colleagues, that Mr. Shriver would "help the ticket."

"He is an enthusiastic man, bouncy, fuil of vigor, has a good record—and he has the Kennedy connection," Sen. Mansfield commented.

Scn. Ernest F. Hollings, D., S.C., predicted that Mr Shriver would help the Democratic ticket in the South, where he said Mr. Shriver is well known and sought after as a speaker. "He has go: dynamism and energy and knows the economic problems of the South from the days when he headed the Office of Economic Opportunity," Sen, Hollings said.

Sen, Fred R. Harris of Oklahome, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said Mr. Shriver would hake "s good running mate" because "he is a very likable person with lots of energy and makes a good impression upon people."

Sen. Frank Church of Idaho said that with Mr. Shriver, Sen. McGovern had found 'a running mate who can reach into the larger cities and industrial areas where he will have to find votes if he is going to win."

Sen. Muskie, who had flown off 13 Drown in Iran to Maine, where he was apparently advised by his wife not to run again, phoned Sen. McGovern at s:30 e.m. yesterday with his decision. According to press secretary

Dougherty, the South Dakota senator still had several other names under consideration, including those of former Demo-cratic National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien and Wisconsin Gov. Patrick Lucey. But he finally settled on Mr. Shriver after talking with Mr. Mankiewicz, an ong others, hy phone, Mr. Rimelman was with Sen. Mc-Govern at his bome here when he called Mr. Shriver. Asked whether these friends cluded Mr. Shriver's hrotherin-law, Sen. Kennedy, Mr. Dou-gherty said that Sen. Kennedy and Sen. McGovern had "lots of conversations over the last few days, but I don't know whether they talked about Sargent Shriver

Mr. Shriver was high on Sen. Humphrey's list of possible running mates in 1968, but Humphrey strategists recalled this week getting negative reactions from the Kennedy family about a Shriver candidacy then.

Mr. Shriver was understood to have incurred some displeasure when he declined that spring to come back from Paris, where he was serving as U.S. ambassador, to campaign for the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

In any crent, Sen. McGovern's sopkesmen welcomed Mr. Shriver to the ticket as a "vigorous and effective speaker" and "a man of considerable accomplishments in public life." Mayor Richard J. Daley joined in from Chicago, where he told colleagues before Sec. McGovern's announcement: "If it's true, it's great."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D., Ill., Mayor Daley's chief spokesman in Congress, said last week that there were two possible candi-dates who would encourage the Daley organization to campaign for the ticket-Sen. Muskie and Mr. Shriver.

Mr. Shriver has long-standing ties in Chicago, where he once managed the Merchandise Mart and headed the Board of Educawho spoke openly of international conspiracies in many matters. A Favorite Son

The five names that were placed in nomination were those of Mr. Schmitz; Tom Anderson of Nashville, Tenn., editor of Farm and Ranch Magazine; Richard B. Kay of Cleveland, a lawyer who defended Lt. William Calley; Allen Greer, a favorite son from Florida, and Lt. Gov. Lester Maddox of Georgia.

New Curbs on Press

SAIGON, Ang. 6 (NYT)—
President Thien yesternay issued a stringent decree, aimed at controlling the press, that seems certain to close many and perhaps most of the daily news-papers in South Vietnam. The move was viewed by South Vietnamese newsmen and diplomatic observers as an attempt to eliminate all opposition comment and criticism.

The decree requires every daily paper to deposit in the govern-ment treasury 20 million pleasers, or about $47,000, within 30 days.
This money, according to the decree, will be a guarantee to cover possible future fines and court charges arising from the government's already strict press code on "national security" mat-

Many dailies here are shoestring operations, and they are expected to go mit of business simply because they camnot raise that amount of money.

Shutdown for 2d Offense

The decree states further that when the daily issue of a newspaper is confiscated by the government for the second time for carrying "articles detrimental to the national security and public order," the Interior Ministry can shut the paper pending a decision in the courts.

The impact of that secondoffense clause could be even more severe than the financial requirement in the decree. Hardly a day passes in Saigon withmut a few dallies having their editions confiscated on grounds of their having violated the security provisions of the press code. Two weeks ago, for example, the government took 44 such alleged violations to court and won a verdict of guilty in 39. There are 46 daily newspapers in South Victaen. All but one, which is based in Can Tho, are published in Salgon. Of the total, 29 are Vietnamese language papers, 14 are printed in Chinese, two in English and one in

Most Are Critical

Only four or five of these can he described as out-and-out opposition newspapers that rarely find anything tavorable to say about the Thieu government, But most of the rest are also critical from time to time, and they, too, have felt the government's wrath.

Newspaper publishers here had been able to avoid paying the large fines handed down by the lower courts by keeping the cases tied up in a morass of appeals in the cumbersome South Vietnamese court system.

With yesterday's action, however, that will become impos-sible. The decree said that The decree said that the courts would have to rule on all press cases within 30 days and that certain cases, apparently those adjudged the most serious by the government, would be handled by military courts from which there would be no ap-out narrow pipe buried under-ground," one official said, "The pumping stations about every five or six miles will probably be the best targets. But even if Hanoi got all the fuel it could use, it still has lost its capability of mounting a first-class offensive." It is felt here that the manpower losses, particularly the losses of officers, noncommissioned officers and trained troops, and the destruction of North Vietnam's rail and road system have so disrupted the country's internal distribution system that a fresh military effort would be almost impossible.

Pentagon officials say that approximately 75 percent of North Vietnam's production of electric power and 27 percent of its petroleum storage capacity have been cut by U.S. bombing, which started May 8.

While the new pipeline is expected to fill needs, distribution south of Hanoi, especially in the current rainy aceson, is expected to present major difficulties.

Crackdown Is Started on Leary Group

SANTA ANA, Calif., Aug. 6 (AP).—Authorities began a crackdown yesterday on the Eternal Brotherhood of Love, a group they charged was probably the biggest peddler of mind-bending drugs in the world. They said the group was an offshoot of the Timothy Leary-founded League of Spiritual Discovery. Fifty-seven persons, including

Leary, were indicted or arrested yesterday. Raids were made at various locations in California, Oregon and Hawaii, they said. Leary, who fled California in 1970 while serving a 10-year prison term for a marijuana conviction in Orange County, was indicted in Orange County, Calif. on a count of conspiracy to emuggle illicit drugs into the United States, and his ball set at $5 million, according to county

Leary took up residence in Switzerland after escaping from the California Men's Colony at San Lais Obispo. Swiss authoritles have rejected both a U.S. demand for his extradition and his own request for political Friday Swiss officials said Leary must leave Switzerland by Oct. 31. They explained that the order does not amount to expulsion and that Leary may return to Switzerland for three months after staying nut of the country for one day.

Officers said a yearlong investigation by local state, federal and international authorities had resulted in seizures of LSD, hashish and hashish oil worth $7.9 million. The group was responsible for bringing more than 1,000 pounds of hashish worth $4.3 million into the United States each month, they said. Big LSD Producer

They said the group was one of the biggest producers of LSD ir the world.

Drugs were distributed and sold by the brotherhood, officials said, through a variety of business fronts such as health-food shops, surf-equipment stores, juice bars, psychedelic shops, used-car lots, a beach club and a rug company. Officials said during the inestigation a total of 1.5 million LSD tablets, 2 1/2 tons of hashish and 30 gallons of hashish oil had been confiscated.

Soviet Pullout From Egypt Complete

By Henry Tanner

CAIRO, Aug. 6 (NYT) .-- Three weeks after it began, the exodus of an estimated 20,000 Soviet military advisers, pilots and mis-sile crews from Egypt has been virtually completed.

Egyptian officials have maintained strict silence about the withdrawal and the numbers involved but government-controlled Cairo newspapers yesterday had front-page stories from Moscow ocoting Prayda as saying the withdrawal was nearing comple-The best information available even the Israeli high command, as quoted in the Western press, now concedes the sweeping character of the Soviet withdrawal. The Israeli government at first suspected that the hard core of the Soviet military presence here would remain. Estimates of diplomatic sources

Most, or all, planes and missiles that had been under exclusive Soviet control are helieved to have been evacuated, leaving the Egyptians with a large arsenal of similar weapons they already controlled while the Russians were still here. None of these figures could be confirmed from Egyptian sources. Diplomats cite the fact that Soriet planes no longer fly surveillance missions against the U.S. Sixth Fleet from Egyptian territory as an example of how profoundly the Egyptian move has transformed the military picture in the Mediterranean. The Russians are still using Syrian airfields, according to

Soviet compliance with the Egyptian withdrawal request has been as discreet as it was quick. # A Touch of Camelot

Thomas Eagleton as Democratic vice-presidential candidate, Sen. McGovern has added a touch of Camelot to his ticket. True, Mr. Shriver is not in direct line of descent within the Kennedy dynasty, nor has he developed the Kennedy appeal at the polls which gave to three brothers three seats in the United States Senate, one presidency and two potential presidencies. But he is a brotherin-law of those three; he has worked for them in politics; he has held high administrative posts in government and was ambassador to France. He has many friends in places of political power, and relatively few enemies. Under the circumstances, it was not a choice for which Mr. McGovern can be seriously faulted on practical grounds.

Now the Democrats confront the technical problems of ironing out disputes over credentials in their national committee and organizing that body to ratify Mr. McGovern's decision. These tasks do not eeem to offer many eerions obstacles, but the Democrats have been so unpredictable this year that a certain tension will remain until the process is completed. And this will bring the Democratic ticket formation almost down to the time when the Republicans assemble in Miami to renominate Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew.

It has been pointed out that in this way the Democrats have lost several weeks' time

By selecting Sargent Shriver to replace advantage over the Republicans. They have spent that interval in sorting out their own disputes and explaining them to the nation, rather than hammering away at their oppouents. Mr. McGovern seemed conscious of this when he accompanied his endorsement of Sargent Shriver with a fair amount of what one television newscaster called "campaign oratory." At any rate, the South Dakota senator was able to make the public point that he does, after all, represent a good deal more than a man harassed by the difficulties of picking out his teammate.

> Mr. McGovern has emerged as quite clearly different from the incumbent president in many ways. His philosophy of government and his approach to foreign affairs are sufficiently distinct to make it urgently necessary for the American people to explore them, not with the hair-splitting techniques that are common in American politics at the uational level, but with the realization that, to the extent that Mr. Nixon and Mr. Mc-Govern can make their wills felt in Congress, rather significant divergences of course could result from the forthcoming election. It is important that these be dehated-not necessarily before a single battery of television cameras, but over the whole period of the campaign. The Democratic tangle over the vice-presidency has been, if not wholly irrelevant, at least subordinate to the debate. It is to be hoped that the real discussion

Trouble With Gold

The commercial value of gold reached $70 an ounce last week, very uearly twice the official price of $38 an ounce. Gold has two prices, and is traded on two separate markets, because it has two entirely different uses. It is money, but it is also a commercial commodity that can be used to fill teeth, make jewelry, or construct electronic circuits. The two different uses are now very seriously interfering with each other.

The main purpose of the world's monetary system is to finance international trade, and part of the trouble is that gold supplies have not been expanding as fast as trade. Newly mined gold comes principally from the Soviet Union and South Africa, which are not the two countries that one would choose to put in charge of the world's medium of exchange. The Russians have, in fact, sold little gold recently, leaving the South Africans enjoying a position closely approaching a monopoly. The South African mines have reduced production this year, contributing to the shortage and the rising prices. Since the South African balance of payments recently tunity to increase its own gold holdings rather than selling abroad. Meanwhile the commercial and industrial demand for gold world demand for most metals is rising.

Now massive currency speculation has driven the price up to a point at which the commercial buyers are being seriously hurt. The Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Shultz, savs that he is considering selling government gold to industrial users. That is certainly the most direct way to reduce the inordinate disparity between the two prices.

The double pricing of gold was intended to protect currencies from the fluctuations of gold speculation. But the present spread between the prices is making nations reluctant to exchange gold even for the classic purpose of settling accounts among governments. The United States, of course, has refused to sell any gold at all for the past year. Italy, fearing an attack on the lira, has made it clear that it prefers not to sell gold. Several small states joining the International Monetary fund have had great difficulty buying enough gold anywhere, at the low official price, to make their deposit

For years the justification of the gold system was that, for all its faults, it worked. But currently it works a great deal less reliably than it once did. Gold is, no doubt, a habit of mind too deeply engrained in mankind to be abolished with a stroke of the reformer's pen. But any progress toward a rational worldwide money supply requires is rising rapidly for the same reasons that a steady movement away from reliance on the fictitious pricing of bars of metal.

The jury nevertheless found him sane, and therefore legally accountable for his abomiuable assault on the Alabama governor.

People will bave their doubts as to the soundness of that verdict, but in Bremer's narrative they have one more proof that national figures-especially Presidents-can no longer afford to plunge in and out of crowds as though they were all Sunday school picnics. He didn't shoot at Mr. Nixon.

Until a way is found to reduce the incidence of such aberrant behavior. whether or not juries find it technically sane. the nation has no choice but to go much further than it has in the direction of gun control and to keep its leaders well out of BELGRADE-If Russia with-draws its forces from Egypt to the full extent that appears likely, leaving behind but token contingents, some reduction in the rate of U.S. arming of Israel might well be looked for. Con-firmation of such speculation could only come in the futureafter this year's Presidential elections.

Any final decision on slowing down weapons replacements must be linked to Moscow's refusal to send Egypt the offensive arms it sought, including MiG-3 aircraft and air-to-surface missiles; also to the fate of the French Mirage should Libya really merge with Egypt as promised.

Obviously both Moscow and. Washington hope to lower the risk threshold of their own Middie East commitments. What Nixon and Brezhnev said to each other on this is still unknown but the Soviet Union would not have refused Cairo further offensive weapons had such a general policy not been at least implied. Since the Six-Day War there has been an enormous change in weapons systems available to both sides and neither Egypt nor Israel can be self-sufficient in modern missile and electronics devices. Moreover, as the time passes existing arms become swiftly outmoded.

Israeli Advantage

Israel has its c.n qualified manpower to man such equip-ment but the Egyptians have had to depend for this also on the Russians. It is now doubtful, after Russia has plainly indicated unwillingness to be dragged physically into a Middle Eastern war, whether it will leave any such experts behind.

A Question of Yardsticks

The Megaton Gap

By Michael Getler

WASHINGTON-For many years now, American missile and bomber forces have been described as lagging far behind their Soviet counterparts in the total amount of brute nuclear explosive power-or megatons-they carry.

And though there are many more important measures of the unclear power balance, the socalled "megaton gap" continues to provide a simple way to dramatire and sometimes exploit a view of Soviet military supremacy.

Government defense agencies, however, have another way to sure the megaton balance. But this yardstick of powerknown as "equivalent megatons" -never shows up in public statements, even though specialists say it is a much more realistic way to measure the actual military effectiveness of nuclear weapons. Furthermore, U.S. estimates of the power balance measured in equivalent megatons rather than gross megatons reportedly show that U.S. forces actually carry a bigger and more effective nuclear punch. One megaton is the equivalent of one militon tons of TNT.

Nuclear Arithmetic

But under the complex rules of nuclear arithmetic, a nine-magaton nuclear weapon is not nine time as effective as a onemegaton blast. It is actually about three times as effective. Thus, three well-aimed one-megaton warheads would do about as much damage as a single large; weapon.

The comparisons of "gross megatonnage" that are usually made public show a 9-to-3 gap in favor of the Soviets. The "equivalent megatonnage" estimates show forces that are about

Primarily because the Soviet missile force contains some 300 of the huge 68-9 missiles, each able to carry about 25 gross megatons in a single warhead, the Soviets are currently estimated to have a total of between 8,000 and 9.000 gross megatons in their missile-homber force. That is about 40 percent more, according to reliable sources, than the United States bas.

'A Nation of Strangers'

By James Reston

FIERY RUN, Va.—In this lovely traditional religious beliefs and from steady work because of rapid of the old eighteenth and nineteenth-century houses have changed hands since the last war, some of them several times, and there has been a steady migration, which illustrates a much larger national problem. Many of the young blacks from the Little Africa community on Rattlesnake Mountain have drifted away to Washington or Baltimore. Affluent businessmen and middle-class civil servants and professional people, weary of the urban turmoil, have retired into the old mansions and tenant houses, seeking the beauty and privacy the blacks have left behind.

Then there are the part-timers. or weekenders, like Eric Sevareid, Frank McGec, Tom Wicker and James Kilpatrick, who have found modest hideaways in these coves and valleys, thinking they will escape the tyranny of the deadline, and never quite managing to get the grass cut back by Sunday night, when they have to go back to their typewriters.

My colleague and neighbor in another place. Vance Packerd. has made a detailed study of the causes and consequences of this nomadic American life in a remarkable and important book soon to be published, "A Nation of Strangers."

"The exploration," he says, "has led me to believe that at least forty million Americans now lead feebly rooted lives. We are seeing so deep an upheaval of life patterns that we are becoming a nation of strangers." He notes the following.

 About 42 million Americans change their home addresses at least once a year.

By 1975, the Census Burean estimates, 65 percent of all Americans will be living in metropolitan areas. In the twenty years be-tween 1940 and 1960, 17.5 million people left the farms-more than half the total living on the land

• Meanwhile, there is a countermovement of young people away from the cities, not into the settled life of the countryside but into a life of almost chronic movement, separated from traditional male-female relationships, from question of the vice-presidency technological and social change. Packard sees some hopeful signs of revolt against this gypsy existence but is generally pessimistic about the deeper trends toward a widespread feeling of loneliness and frustration.

"While the footlooseness of Americans as pioneers was a source of vitality and charm," he says, "several of the new forms that the accelerating rootlessness of Americans is taking should be a cause for alarm. Great numbers of inhabitants feel unconnected to either people or places and throughout much of the nation there is a breakdown of community living. In fact, there is a shattering of small-group life. A number of forces are promoting social fragmentation. We are confronted with a society that is coming apart at the seams."

Not New

Well, it is not a new lament. but it would be a bold man who could face Packard's well-dc_umented indictment without a sense of anxiety, and one of the odd things about it is that we are having a presidential election to determine the leadership of the nation for the next foor years and there has been very little talk ebout the fundamental issues.

Both President Nixon and Sen. McGovern have recognized the problem; both favor a wider distribution of industry and jobs, a more equal standard of welfare payments and tax reform which would produce a fairer redistribution of wealth.

But they differ wildly about the means of achieving these common goals. The President is saying, in effect, that it is possible to have $80-billion defense budgets and enough billions left over social order and to maintain a vigorous expansion of private re-wards. Sen. McGovern is questioning this fundamental assumption and insisting that the government is faced with truly radical problems and must choose radical reforms to meet them. But far more time and space have been devoted to Tom Facieton's health than to the health of the nation. Far more to the than to the question of vice. Far more to Ed Muskie's migrations between Washington and Maine and his final withdrawal from the vice-presidential race than to the vast migrations of the American people.

It is widely assumed, for example, that the question of the security of the United States is primarily a question of the size of the defense budget and the negotiations with the Russians about the control of old and new weapons systems. But we may very well be coming into a new phase of world history where the major question of security lies not in a confrontation of armies but in a confrontation of eocieties. Mr. Lincoln emphasized the point over a hundred years ago when the American people were divided over what kind of society this was to be. Foreign armies and problems were not the major threat, he insisted, but internal dissension and confusion could weaken and threaten the Republic. This is still a great issue for debate, and the vast, restless migrations of the American people are only part of it.

But in essence this problem comes down to simpler things. To be deeply rooted in a place that has meaning is perhaps the best gift a child can have," Christopher Morley wrote long ago.
"If that place has beanty and a feeling of permanence, it may suggest to him unawares that sense of identity with this physical earth which is the humblest and happiest of life's intuitions."

HESS: But now, with the mining of the North Vietnamese harbors, where will this con-frontation lead? MALRAUX: To Japan, arbiter of the whole Pacific game. In four years, Japan will be the second greatest economic power in the world, behind the United States but shead of the Soviet Union; and at that moment America, which is now embracing these Chinese. will be forced to adopt a Japanese policy—that means giving them atomic bombs. If the Americans do not, then tho Russians will. We have four years. Then, we're in a serious situation, the Americans and the Russians wooing this ravishing maid-which one will go to bed with her?

When America decided to play the Chinese card, it was very lucid, I think. But to play that card against Moscow meant just the same that the time would come when either America says to Japan; "You are no longer a satellite and we are giving you the nuclear means," or Russians arrive with broad smiles, saying, "Now, it's our turn." I don't see how it can end otherwise.

RESS:Doubtless it's the oceupational disease of a reporter for a daily newspaper, but I find mysel much more concerned with the immediate crisis of Vietnam.

MALRAUX: You are right, but what does it matter? Assuming the worst, what are the historic consequences? The United States has already taken its safety measures in Thailand, so that even if Vietnam is lost it is no longer a capital affair. Secondly, and this is very, very important, when the United States engaged in the tragic game of Vietnam, it thought that the stakes were the fate of the world against Asia—that is, Chinese Communism, which the United States, incidentally, had invented. For me, I think Chinese Communism has always been excessively serious inside China, and always been not at

So the United States in Vietnam was waging the war between Communism and the Free World? Come, come, nobody in the world believes that any more... The United States did not have a sick craving to dominate Southern Asia. It adopted a demented policy in the Bangladesh affair, but gave it up quite calmly. So what's left? That the Chinese will conquer yellow Asia? You know as well as I do that it no longer believes that.

all serious outside China

I have told the Americans, "If you put it into your heads that the Chinese are obsessed by the conquest of Asia, it's a total error." I pointed out that in China there is a monthly that corresponds to your Life magazine. You look at 10 issues, and you notice that there is absolutely nothing in it on the revolutionary

UN Documents Drop Taiwan as Separate Entry

UNITED NATIONS, Aug. 6 (AP).—Under pressure from China, United Nations legal counsel has ruled that Taiwan cannot be mentioned separately "in any form whatsoever" in any UN document or publication.

Under Secretary-General Constantin A. Stavropoulos made the ruling after the Chinese amhassador, Huang Hua, told him that the expulsion of Taiwan last year meant there should be no more reference here to "two Chinas,"
"one China, one Taiwan," "one China, two governments," or anything similar.

Mr. Stavropoulos suggested to Mr. Huang that UN statistical publications be allowed to list Taiwan indented beneath the People's Republic of Chins. He said that continuing to list Taiwan would not express an opinion on the island'e legal etatus, but Peking, which claims the ter-ritory, refused to agree.

Mr. Stavropoulos's ruling, and his correspondence with Mr. Huang, which came to light this week, took place between March

Well, you're right, but I wouldn't have told you, "The fate of the world will be decided in Bangla-"The fate of the world desh." It was important, but that has nothing to do with my emotional factors—just as your emotional factors on Vietnam are not so rational. They are what they are. Me, I think your emotions on Vietnam are different, they are what mine were on Algeria. For us, that was frightful. For that had gone on the way it was ... HESS: Can you foresee what may happen in Vietnam in coming weeks?

MALRAUX: No. But I will make one flat prediction—that it will not be settled in Peking. It's simply not true that the Chinese can settle the Vietnam question militarily. Not true... They will make speeches as usual explaining that they are the defenders of Asian freedom, and all of that will be completely chimerical.

HESS: Well, they did jump into Korea when they felt threatened, didn't they?

MALRAUX: The whole question, the whole question is there! Korea was very serious because the Chinese felt themselves threatened, just as the Americans became very serious when it was a question of missiles in Cube. That's how it was with Kores, but not with Vietnam...
For me, it all may be summed up easily; First of all, Russia today wants to encircle China - Siberia, Bangladesh, Vietnam. On this, Russia is playing for keeps. It is the Russlans who have been rebuilding the Indian Army for three years. They are driving nard now, and China, in my opinion, will not fight, because what China wants now is not at all a new conflict with Russia-it's the development of China. They dazzle us with a sort of Chioese revolution that is sup-posed to be conquering Asia. They're doing nothing, It's the Russians who are fighting.

President Nixon Gives Fischer An Invitation

NEW YORK, Aug. 8 (UPI),-President Nixon, the nation's No. 1 sports fan, is rooting for Bohby Fischer in the world chess championships and has invited the U.S. challenger to visit him in the White House-win or lose.

Life magazine said today that Mr. Nixon relayed his invitation to Fischer through Life photographer Harry Benson, who went from a White House assignment to Reykjavík, where the chess match is under way,

Mr. Nixon, an avid sports fan, likes to call locker rooms to congratulate winning teams, once offered a football play to the Washington Redskins and recently drew up a list of his all-time, all-star "Fischer listened with growing delight as Benson reported what Nixon had said, that he wanted Fischer to come visit him, even if he loses, that he liked him because he is a fighter," Life The magazine said Fischer, who has "a high and earnest respect" for the President, was "wowed" by the invitation.

'Sweet Harvest' Blighted

To McGovern Race?

By James M. Naughton

McGovern had called it "the sweet harvest" when he accepted the Democratic nomination for President last month, but during most of last week It seemed more like a case of disastrous crop failure. His head start on the Republicans had withered away, his hopes of party unity had been blighted, and his campaign had failed to sprout. The central fact was that until Saturday when Sargent Shriver was finally named and accepted, the senator from South Dakota had no running mste. And what appeared to matter was not that had jettisoned Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton from his ticket last Monday or that his fourth choice for a replacement—Sen. Edmund Muskie-turned him down earlier Saturday, hut that he had gone about the whole affair in such a way as to cast doubt on his ability, or willingness, to meet his own test of public performance.

"Truth is a habit of integrity. not a strategy of politics," he said in his acceptance speech at Miami

Last Monday, six days after asserting "Irrevocable" support for Sen. Eagleton despite his disclosure of hospitalizations in 1960, 1964 and 1966 for mental exhaustion and depression, and five days after reasserting that be was "1,000 percent for Tom Eagleton," Mr. McGovern asked Tom Eagleton to become the first American in history to resign the vicepresidential nomination.

The two had conferred in the Marble Room of the Capitol, where for nearly two bours Mr. Eagleton argued that an avalanche of letters and telegrams nrging him to "hang in there" made him an asset to the ticket. But Mr. McGovern countered that the polls showed, and his strategists feared, that Mr. Eagleton's health history could cost the Democrats two, three, four or an undetermined number of percentage points in the election and margin of victory would be too narrow to risk that.

WASHINGTON (IHT)-George ticket was insecure. In a not-for-

He instructed Jean Westwood, the party chairman, to say on a television program a week ago Sonday that she thought Mr. Eagleton should with-

When he emerged from the Marhle Room, Mr. Eagleton's eyes were red. He accepted the decision, tossing his arm around Mr. McGovern and repeating over and over that it was "the correct decision, the only decision."

Mr. McGovern explained why it had been made an hour later, when both men appeared in the Senate caucus room. While he had no doubts about Sen. Eagleton's health, Mr. McGovern sald. tha week-long national dehate over his running mate's electric shock treatments and little hlue tranquilizers had "dominated the political dialogue of the country" and threatened to obscure the issues Mr. McGovern wanted to raise in the coming campaign. "Continued dehate between those who oppose his candidacy and those who fevor it will serve to further divide the party and the nation." he told a hushed audience of journalists, aides and tearful Eagleton supporters.

A TV Celebrity

Mr. Eagleton, still red-eyed but tions as he had seemed throughout his ordeal, stepped forward to agree that "my personal feelings are secondary to the necessity to unify the Democratic party and elect George McGovern as the next President." He consented even to campaign for the new ticket and, hy week's end, had become a television celebrity at least as great as Mr. McGovern. But the questions remained about how Mr. McGovern had gone about the reshaping of his ticket. Critics asked whether he could now expect ready accep-tance of a pledge, say, of "1,000 percent" support for Israel or for tax reform. And wbether his performance raised questions as

As you know, Senator McGovern and T are jointly in agreement that I should withdraw as the Democratic candidate for Vice President. Needless to say, this was not an easy decision for Senator McGovern or for me. Literally thousands and thousands of people have phoned, telegramed or written to me and Senator McGovern urging me to press on.

My candidacy, however, has apparently caused deep divisions within the Democratic Party, which already has too many divisions. My personal feelings are secondary to the necessity to unify the Democratic Party and elect George McGovern President of the United States. I support George McGovern and I'm going to continue working to see him elected President of the United States.

dling of the Eagleton affair seemed to come from one of the candidate's associates whose defense --- "he doesn't like to hurt people" -was based more on an assessment of Mr. McGovern's character than on intimacy with the facts. But the assessment, some ohservers were quick to point out, might suggest either compassion, a political plus, or timidity, a questionable leadership trait.

First Instinct

As the associate described lum, Mr. McGovern's first instinct was to give Mr. Eagleton a chance to take his case to the country. Then, implored by his strategists and editorial writers to dump Mr. Eagleton and convinced that it was inevitable, Mr. McGovern was sald to have chosen to walt in the hope that Mr. Eagleton would reach the sama conclusion. McGovern's preoccupation during tha past two weeks with the vicepresidential problem gave away a valuable chance to get the jump on the Republicans in organizing the 50 states, registering new voters, raising political cash and trying to make peace overtures to the disenchanted party regulars.
"Everything just came to a halt," sald one McGovern aide. Some Democrats professed to see the dumping of Mr. Eagleton as well as in the prolonged search for his replacement proof of their skeptical judgments about Sen. McGovern's capacity to lead the party to victory or indeed to gov-ern if he ever did reach the White House. The morale at his headquarters has plummeted. TORAGUE (NYT).-An atmoaphere of hostility and protest lingers in Prague these days, fours years after Soviet tanks arrived here to end an experiment in Communist reform. It is considered far short of a threat to the authorities, hut they worry anyway and move quickly, some times sharply, to control any indication of dissent. The result is something of a stalemate, with those who oppose the government too feeble to express anything but token resistance and the government seemingly indecisive about enacting reforms that are still needed.

The trials of dissidents who have persisted in expressing op-position to the Husak government are intended to mark the end of the Dubcek chapter, but they have also exposed new pockets of opposition that may only delay the healing process. Evidently some Czechoslovaks still will take almost any op-portunity to express their hostility, shaking their fists in the faces of policemen outside a courtroom, for example, or making provocative statements until their names are taken down or they are picked up to be questioned and warned.

The hostility needs only an incident such as a trial or a hockey victory over the Russians to flare into the open. slovak leaders can provoke long and serious arguments. Is Mr. Husak a moderate fighting off the hardliners around him, or is he Moscow's man? There are no arguments about the Russians, however. The feelings toward Moscow are widely shared. These feelings sometimes take

The government, similarly, denies the allegation that the nation is suffering aftereffects of the purge. Many former professors, theoreticians, economic planners, writers and other intellectuals are doing manual labor.

Some good people are abroad and we hope to get them back," the official said, "but there are plenty of good minds still at work in economic planning and other important areas."

A widespread malaise does exist, however. It includes the once-large community of Czechs who were excited about the Dubcek reforms. Many have turned their backs on politics, while others argue with each other.

"It's true, there is not muchi interest in the trials," a former journalist said. "People are tired, just plain weary. They've argued 1968 so many times that there is nothing new to be said."

Resignation

A Western diplomat was asked. how he assessed the mood in Prague. "Well," he said, "you could say that people have moved from despair to resignation."

A Czech said: "We used to feel we could tolerate the party. Then music but people singing as well." One woman spoke scornfully of the careerists—the word here is carierovich, a Czech word with a Russian ending to give it a sting in the Communist party who manage to hang on. She said: "Right after the war I had a good job with a foreign company based here. My father had spent four years in prison under the Nazis for his beliefs and we starved while others in this country got rich. But then it looked good after the war.

Ties to War

Mr. Shriver's political ideology is invariably described as "liber-al," although in the minds of the unforgiving, he is associated with the Vietnam war in two waysthrough his positions in the Johnson administration through 1968 and, earlier, as tha recruiter for President Kennedy who helped hring into the government Defense Secretary Robert McNamara and Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

His attitudes on popular issues were reflected in a 1970 speech in Michigan:

"There are those who say the way to win an election is to appeal to the majority, to indulge your prejudices if you want. If you don't like Negroes, go ahead, express it. They're never going to be a majority of Americans. If you don't like the poor, go ahead, say it. They're only a small percentage. # A Year of Nixon's New Economic Program Shows Auto Industry as Chief Beneficiary

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (NYT) -In retrospect, as the first an-niversary of the administration's New Economic Program approsches, it is abundantly clear that the chief beneficiary among domestic industries has been the nation's automotive husiness.

That, of course, was one of the objectives of the dramatic actions taken on Aug. 15 s year sgo. It was felt that stimulation of the automotive industry would bare profound rippling effects on the many other industrial, service and civic activities that are tied in so intimately with the health and prosperity of the car and truck manufacturers.

Broader objectives were also involved, particularly the desire to change the mood of the country on the economic situation and to restore the nation's competi-tiveness in world trade.

There has been some measure of success in gaining the broader objectives, although it cannot be readily conceded that some eccomplishments with respect to inflation control, employment and productivity would not have been realized without the new policies. And the trade and payments goals are certainly not at hand as yet. But credit for the ongoing hoom in autos indisputably belongs to the various facets of the policies edopted a year ago.

At that time, with elimination of the ? percent excise tax on autos, the imposition of a 10 percent surcharge on imported products and the eventual realignment of foreign currencies in company with a formal devaluation of the dollar, Washington hoped to trigger a latent hurst consumer confidence that could spawn public decisions to invest in a new American automobile and thus foster greater activity among many suppliers and other industries.

test to the achievement of that key objective.

M.S. McLaughlin, sales group vice-president for the Ford Motor Co., was quite precise in his estimate of the help the U.S. auto industry received from the tax, surcharge, currency and various price actions here and abroad in

And, with the definite upward trend of past months as hackground, there is a continued outlook for high level sales in the

It is clear, however, that one major objective of the new economic program—an increase in the number of jobs in the U.S. economy-has not been achieved so far as the automotive industry is concerned. Nevertheless, the number of people at work now throughout the economy is sub-stantially higher than a year ago hefore the adoption of the new

Total employment in the last 12 months has grown by 2,668,000 persons to 84,681,000, while the unemployment rate has declined from 5.9 percent to 5.5 percent.

Further signs that the nation's economic expansion was proceeding vigorously helped propel tha stock markets to their strongest gains of the year in slightly more active trading. The fast pace in auto sales, retail volume, durable goods orders, consumer credit and inventory accumulation provided tha favorable background news for the stock market's performance. They offset some discouraging news on the increased rate of farm and wholesale prices as well as the unclinanged level of the unemployment rate at 5.5 per-quarter corporate profits, news that factory orders and inventorles surged in June, the sharpest gain for inventories in more than two cent in July. On the New York Stock Exchange, all the leading market averages advanced strongly as the market profile showed 1,130 stocks advancing and 595 decilining. Turnover for the week totaled 80.1 million shares, compared with price index which finished on Friday at 26.92, up 0.18 from the close of the preceding week.

Turnover expanded to 19.359,000 shares from 16,788,000 shares the week before as institutional activity increased. A total of 56 blocks of 10,000 shares or more changed hands against 47 blocks 76.9 million the week hefore.

Among the market averages, which staged their biggest advance in eight months, the Dow-Jones industrials climbed 25.06 points to 951.76; the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 3.05 to 110.43, and the Stock Exchange composite rose 1.62 to 60,75.

Pricing is expected to be at par or a small discount. Scheduled for later this month is a new twist on the twin currency theme -an offering from a public body in Copenhagen in Danish krone/-

The Australian dullar/DM issue from the Rural & Industrial Bank of Western Australia was priced last week at par with a 51/2 per-cent coupon and a dollar-DM conversion of one to 3.7831 DM.

Another new twist is the proposal from the Kredietbank group of banks for a redefinition of the currencies comprised in Units of Account. They propose that only 10 currencies from the countries making up the Common Market as of next Jan 1-be used for this measure of value instead of the present 17 national currencies (of countries which had belonged to the now defunct European Payments Union).

They base their suggestion on the fact that one day, theoretically, the 10 present currencies will die and form one European money and on the assumption that the narrow band of exchange rate margins maintained among against the floating of a constituent currency. However, the principle of the Unit of Account—that it changes in value only when all the component values change and then only to the extent of the smallest change-remains intact.

6 EEC Countries Plan Legal Unity

BRUSSELS. Aug. 6 (AP).—Common Market officials announced that courts throughout the six member countries will begin no later than Jan. 1 to enforce each other's civil judgments. It will mean that when a French court, for example, decides that a lirm or individua owes a debt to another, the decision will be enforced by a West German or Dutch court, if necessery. One judgment will be enough for the entire community. The agreement will not be applicable to Britain, Ireland, Norway and Denmark, which are scheduled to become full members on Jan. I, until further negotiations have been held. It has been ratified only by the present six members, a process that took nearly four years.

South gave a negative response of two diamonds to his partner's strong artificial opening bid of two clubs. After North rebid clubs, South could not bid three diamonds, which would have been a second negative in the partnership methods, so he jumped to four diamonds, hoping that his long unbroken suit would be an asset opposite the wealth of high cards promised by his partner. North bid four no-trump conventionally, and judged well to continue to six diamonds over five diamonds. The partnership was using "Key-card Blackwood," in which the king of trumps counts as an ace, so South showed one key card. The opening lead of the spade queen was taken by the ace in dummy, and the declarer had to play for immediate discards before touching trumps. He cashed two winners, discarding one club spade loser from his hand, and then had to make a crucial decision: To try for a discard on hearts, or to play a third round of clubs,

At first sight, it might seem that a third round of hearts was more likely to survive than a third round of clnbs, but there was an additional factor to consider. If a third round of clubs was attempted and East ruffed, there was a second chance. The declarer could overruff and then fall back on the hearts.

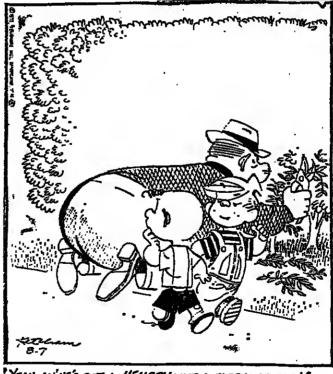

South decided to play hearts, but could not decide intuitively which was the better play. He was right to be in doubt because mathematics—quite complex mathematics that could not be attempted at the table-show that the two possible plays were both about 80 percent chances. As it turned out, either would have

THE GREAT EXECUTIVE DREAM By Robert Heller. Delacourte. 294 pp. $793

This most other business. British-born, Cambridge-educat-ed writer on business and finance, editor of Management Today, has been studying the followays of management throughout his adult life. "The Great Executive Dream" is an interim report of what he has seen. Judging by his stance in the book, he is not going to win any cheers from the Chamber of Commerce. His attitude to big business is far from worshipful. It is bemused, mocking, skeptical, cautionary and open-eyed. Business executives may kid themselves, but they are not going to kid him. His topics are varied: management theory, conglomerates, labor relations, de-centralization, one-man rule, the use of computers, the place of consultants and much else. But if the topics are numerous, Mr. Heller's point of view is consis-tent. It is always to measure performance against theory and, as far as he is concerned, to throw out the theory. The more that business tries to raise a mystique or metaphysic around what it is doing the more jaun-diced Mr. Heller's comments become. And since he has an invigorating style and is an epigramatic phrase maker, he is sure to draw blood from prickly executives. It doesn't follow, of course, that he is always right. Other observers close to the business world will undoubtedly argue his con-clusions with him. The reader, though will always know where the author stands. On the matter of executive compensation, for example, Mr. Heller says, "Greed is the great motivator, in all its forms, and you can't disentangle greed, for money or anything else. from nonfinancial motives of equal force, such as ambition" It's a sentence that reduces all talk about self-fulfillment, social service, do-goodism to a matter of commerce. It doesn't take a lofty view of the business function but it is one that cuts through a lot of public relations

At the same time—and this is an indication of Mr. Heller's approach to his subject-he has carefully scrutinized those businesses in which top men receive stock options, each incentives and the like, and he has found that in the top 100 companies in the United Bingdom, "there was no distinction in results between managements that granted them-selves every financial stimulus under the sun and those tiny few that bumbled along on straight salary—except that, by performing no better than the straight salary managers, the carrot danglers got much richer." He's for stock options, though, for a good and sardonic reason. He the executives ought to suffer the same ups and downs in their holdings as the average stock-

Life in a Wet Blanket

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.—We went to was so calm, cool, judicious and The air was like glue. In the evenings we sat in houses that ington to be in the grip of hysreeked of moss and talked about power. death, seniority and traf- about it. fic. There was a lot of hysteria about the vice-presidency of the United States, In New York, a Washington woman had told us that we must see Washington in August. We had been listening to been listening to New Yorkers boast of the hor-

Baker rors they endured in New York. The Washington woman had been miffed. Compared to Washington in August. New York was a sissy town. She had shown us her gas gun, without which she never ventured into the streets of Washington. and snapshots of her man-eating watchdog which was, at that very moment, sitting in her Washington home guarding the United States Savings Bonds.

Periodically in Washington, it rained. Sometimes it rained in washtub volume, which sluiced through the houses, accounting for the tiny mushroom growths in many of the town's parlors, we wcre told.

Other times, it rained sullen little mists. Vapors reminiscent of the midnight lawn scenes in "Dracula" hillowed off the grass. Sinister trees dripped melodramatically. Nights along the deserted streets left us on the edge of hysteria, possibly because of the Intense silences. Silences so profound that we could hear the spiders stalking the insects. There was, of course, the occasional clang of an empty heer can against a oo left turn at any time

Sundry hosts counseled us not to fight the hysteria. Washington, they told us, was the home office of hysteria. The license plates said "nation's capital.") Hysteria was the local coodition. It was perfectly all right to be hysterical, Presidents dld it. vicepresidents dld lt. Congress did it all the time and the press did It six or seven times a day. Even the Supreme Court did it oow

Nights, hack in our hotel room, we swapped stories about the different forms of hysteria we had seen in Washington during the day. It was curious how well disguised the hysteria usually was. We met a man who firmly believed that the well-being of future generations depended upon utterly ruthless extermioation of -what was it the man wanted an unfriendly nation-something like that. It doesn't really matter what it was that he was hysterical about. The point is that he eel under the dining room table.

Washington. It was August, impressive in explaining his case. While it is natural in Washteria, it is important to look calm

> There was a lot to see besides the rain and the mist. One day we went to the Fedcral Power Commission and saw commissioners raise the price of natural gas. At first we were alarmed because the price rise meant that we would have to pay a lot more to heat our house, but the Federal Power commissioners dispelled our unhappiness by explaining that paying higher > prices would be good for us. We also went to the House of Representatives. The House passed a bill to give several million dollars to companies which had suffered when the government made them stop selling us products that contained cyclamates.

We asked a man there if, in case one of us ever suffered on account of something the government did, such as raising the price of natural gas, the House of Representatives would also vote some money for us. He said it was cynical questions like that which had undermined the nation's youth.

We had wanted, of course, to go to the Pentagou and see the war room, where split-second decisions concerning the survival of the universe are constantly being made hy computers. As luck would have it, however, the rains had flooded the war room, and It was closed for repairs.

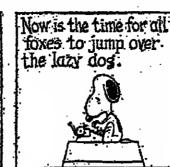

Our last night in Washington produced a torrent. It swept through our host's living room and ruined the piano. The host was furious. One of his guests was a Pentagon man. The host accused him of ruining the plan). He knew the Pentagon had been experimenting with turning weather into a weapon, the host said. Undoubtedly, somebody had been playing around with cloudseeding down at the Pentagon. This had caused the rain which nobody now knew how to turn off. He called the Pentagon man a monster. The Pentagon man said he could not respond to the charge, Everybody at the Peotagon was under orders not to comment on this talk about a weather weapon, he said. But he thought he was justified in pointing out to the host that he-the host-was not looking at all calm about his hysteria. The Peotagon man looked very calm, although he later told us that unless something-the Gohi desert? Fig Newtons?-was bombed back to the stone are within the next two years. Western civilization

There was also that last night a lot of bysteria about the vicepresidency. Somebody found an

That Quick Fox Has Editor on the Go

By Israel Shenker NEW YORK (NYT).-True to type, untiringly, for something like the last century,

The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog.

But every dog has his day, and now the typewriter alphabet sentence—a practice exercise containing all 26 letters-is jumping his way. "I usually twist my sentences arcund to the dog side," Dr. Alan C. Lloyd said.

"The quick brown dog is jumping over a lazy fox."

Dr. Lloyd whose doctoral thesis analyzed every typing book in the English language, is McGraw-Hill's "editor in chief, typewriting." He heads a staff of eight, and he clicks out alphabet sentences with studled aplonib and unfailing sympathy for the underdog. In Dr. Lloyd's recent sentences, his animals jump over obstacles galore. "Sometimes they jump over a gazelle or a lynx, and occasionally they jump like a zephyr hut not over anything." he said.

Pursuing the trend, L. W. Erickson, in "Typing Our Lan-guage" (Scott, Poresman), has his animals up to all kinds of high jinks:

A large fawn jumped quickly over white zinc boxes.

Many big jackdaws quickly zipped over the fox pen.

After fauna come flora. In Prentice-Hall's fields, the zinnias bloom, and also pink phlox, giant larkspur, yellow jonquils, blue gardenias, tan-talizing marigolds and just plain dogwood and foxglove. They all rear their lower-case heads in "Tested Typing Drills" hy the alphahetically luxuriant authors M. Fred Tidwell, Richard B. Kittleman and J. Ailen Suver.

Pale and unprofitable are the manuals that ignore the glories of this age. As Dr. Lloyd ohserves in the new high shool test, "Typing 300".

Five or six big planes zoomed quickly by the new tower.

Prof. Leonard J. West, proicssor of educational research nt the City University of New York, keeps tabs on changing fashions. "In carier years [through the 1930s]." he said. 'sbortness was accomplished by incorporating the relatively rare letters (zgkjpcv, etc.) in absurd proper names that would have delighted W. C. Fields." A typical delight, Professor West suggested, would have run as fol-

Martin J. Hixeypozer quickly began his first · word,

"More recently the attempt has been to write more sensible sentences." Professor West noted. In the forthcoming Vocational and Personal Typewriting" (Pitman), which he wrote with Gertrude Altholz, names are rarely posers:

Jim just quit and packed extra heavy bags for Liz Owen.

Jim and Liz are sturdy perennials in the cast of consonantal heavies who plod and jostle through the manuals. A sampling of other key figures, in alphabetical disorder; Hazel. Zeke, Jasper, Jeff, Jake, Max, Rex and Inez.

Dr. Lloyd says the hardest letter to incorporate is J. "You start with q, z, x and overlook the j. Then you write judge, jest, journey, adjust, jilt, job and suddenly you're out of j's. Jacqueline's a beauty because it has the j as well as the q."

On occasion, experts joust in so attempt to underdo each other in producing the shortest alphabet sentence. One of the least likely sentences runs:

The five boxing wizards jump quickly.

A more celebrated, more extended short snorter directs:

Pack my box with five dozen liquor jugs.

England's alphabet sentences are more inclined to verbosity and moralizing. In Britain's 'Gregg Typing First Course.' preachy practice makes perfect:

Their kind aunt was subject to frequent dizzy spells, thus causing much anxiety and grave worry.

Another would appear thoroughly alien in an American manual;

The junior office clerks were quite amazed at the extra reward given by their generous employer. -

At giving the alphabet a run for their money, the English win hands down.

BOULDER, Colo., Aug. 6 (Reuters).-A series of solar flares has set off one of the biggest geomagnetic storms ever measured here. Radlo and telephone communications have been disrupted or totally blacked out over wide areas—and one local scientist studying the effects of the flares believes that the disturbances could even be the cause of homing pigeons losing their way home.

Two large flares and five medium flares have been measured during the three days up to last night by scientists at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, a federal agency with headquarters here. More flares ore expected.

A snokesman reported that the flares had 20 five higgest storms ever recorded by the agency during its 30 years of existence.

The flares are eruptions of lonized gas around the sun. The gas cloud created, along with assorted solar debris such as X-rays and radio waves, is sent speeding toward the earth, stretching the sun's magnetic field like a rubber band. When this magnetic field encounters the earth's magnetic field, the communications trouble starts. Already radio transmissions in polar regions have been blacked out and communications have been disrupted in Canada and other parts of North America, a spokesman said. There was a likelihood that communications were also being hit in other continents. . Another effect of the magnetic storm could be to throw birds' sensitive navigation systems out of gear, Percy Carr, of Iowa State University, believes, During one experiment recently he found that homing pigeons got lost during a magnetic storm. He has a theory that pigeons
